

the idea of revoking the regulations on media ownership is ridiculous. the news we watch and listen to in america is already scensored enough; let alone if one company can own all the media in a given city. This thought actually disturbs me. and what disturbs me even more is that air waves are the public's you can't privatize or make big corporations out of public air waves but that seems to be exactly what the fcc is trying to do. and even more displeasing is the lack of media coverage on the issue, very convenient. i believe there would be public outrage at the thought of deregulation if the general public knew what was going on. chalk another one up for corporate america.
